BISMARCK.

Prince Otto von Bismarck, unquestionably one of the greatest and most notable men of the century, was born in 1815. He was made prime minister of Prussia in 1862, chancellor of the North German Confederation in 1867, and when the empire took the place of the confederation in 1871 he became chancellor of the empire.

The unification of Germany, and the political greatness of Prussia and the empire, are ascribed to the sagacity and statesmanship of Bismarck, which has justly made him famous. He guides the foreign policy of the empire and also administers the domestic affairs of state with vigilance and foresight.

On the occasion of the celebration of Emperor William's ninetyeth birthday, March 22, Prince Bismarck and Gen. Von Moltke (to whom is attributed the present prosperity and greatness of the empire) were awarded high honors by the Emperor.

A Peep into the National Library.

In an article on "Uncle Sam's Book Case" in the April Cosmopolitan, Frank G. Carpenter says:

The Library is lighted by skylights. Its framework is of beautifully carved iron, painted in cream and gold, and it is one of the most beautifully decorated rooms of the Capitol. The workers in it are men, women and children, and they are of all conditions and professions. During my visit I saw two judges of the Supreme Court, Harlan and Bradley, working away at one table, while Senator Hoar sat at another, and between them a school boy was busy reading a story. In another corner George Ticknor Curtis, the biographer, was grinding away with a lot of historical books before him, and near by a young Washington lawyer was looking over the great bound files of The National Intelligencer of the year A. D. 1800. A cabinet minister's wife stood at the table in the center of the room, behind which Mr. Spofford gives out the books, and beside her was a plainly dressed girl, who looked as though she might make shirts for a living. A half-dozen librarians were rushing here and there carrying great armfuls of volumes, and the stout man in charge of the newspaper-room was bringing in file after file of heavy newspapers. The whole formed a busier scene than the corridors of the Congressional Hall, and each of these human bees seemed busy gathering honey from the intellectual flowers of the past.

According to the report of the British and Foreign Bible Society for 1883, the Bible has been translated, in whole or in part, in 354 languages.

A LESSON WITH A MORAL.

When Will Our Eyes be Opened to this Great National Calamity.

The year 1886 played sad havoc with many prominent men of our country.

Many of them died without warning, passing away apparently in the full flush of life.

Others were sick but a comparatively short time. We turn to our files and are astonished to find that most of them died of apoplexy, of paralysis, of nervous prostration, of malignant blood humor, of Bright's disease, of heart disease, of kidney disease, of rheumatism or of pneumonia.

It is singular that most of our prominent men die of these disorders. Any journalist who watches the telegraph reports will be astonished at the number of prominent victims of these disorders.

Many statements have appeared in our paper with others to the effect that the diseases that carried off so many prominent men in 1886 are really one disease, taking different names according to the location of the fatal effects.

When a valuable horse perishes, it becomes the nine days' talk of the sporting world, and yet thousands of ordinary horses are dying every day, their aggregate loss is enormous, and yet their death creates no comment.

So it is with individuals. The cause of death of prominent men creates comment, especially when it can be shown that one unsuspected disease carries off most of them, and yet "vast numbers of ordinary men and women die before their time every year from the same cause."

It is said if the blood is kept free from uric acid, that heart disease, paralysis, nervous prostration, pneumonia, rheumatism, and many cases of consumption, would never be known. This uric acid, we are told, is the waste of the system, and it is the duty of the kidneys to remove this waste.

We are told that if the kidneys are maintained in perfect health, the uric, kidney, acid is kept out of the blood, and these sudden and universal diseases caused by uric acid will, in a large measure, disappear.

But how shall this be done? It is folly to treat effects. If there is any known way of getting at the cause, that way should be known to the public. We believe that Warner's safe cure of which so much has been written, and so much talked of by the public generally, and which can be obtained of dealers everywhere, is now recognized by impartial physicians and the public as the one specific for such diseases.

Because public attention has been directed to this great remedy by means of advertising, some persons have not believed in the remedy. We cannot see how Mr. Warner could immediately benefit the public in any other way, and his valuable specific should not be condemned because some nostrums have come before the public in the same way, any more than that all doctors should be condemned because so many of them are incompetent.

It is astonishing what good opinions you hear on every side of that great remedy, and public opinion thus based upon an actual experience, has all the weight and importance of absolute truth.

At this time of the year, the uric acid in the blood invites pneumonia and rheumatism, and there is not a man who does not dread these monsters of disease; but he need have no fear of them, we are told, if he rid the blood of the uric acid cause.

These words are strong, and may sound like an advertisement, and be rejected as such by unthinking people, but we believe they are the truth, and as such should be spoken by every truth-loving newspaper.

Poultry on the Farm.

Poultry on a farm are as much a necessity as cows or hogs. What would many of the dishes which farmers' wives and daughters prepare for the family be if it were not for the hen fruit they contain? But poultry, to be profitable, should run at large. They are good foragers, will destroy vast numbers of injurious insects, and at certain seasons of the year should be allowed free to every part of the farm, including the garden. No better place can be found for a hen and chickens in the spring of the year than the garden. As soon as the chicks are able to run about confine the hen in a coop in the garden sufficiently open to allow the chicks to run in and out, changing the same to a fresh place daily, and the chicks will then live principally on insects. The benefits to be derived from so doing are a great saving of food, a healthier and more rapid growth of chicks, the garden kept clear of insects, and better fruit and vegetables the result.

That there is a difference in the various families of fowls none will dispute, and the question then is, which is the best for the farmer to keep—that is, which are the easiest to raise and return the most profit? Among the different breeds of fowls some persons prefer one and some another. We must say we have found the Black-Breasted Red Game to be good. They are not only as hardy as any others, but are good layers, good mothers, good foragers, and all but in size among the best table fowls. Their eggs are of fine flavor, and as to their pugnacity, they are not more pugnacious than some other breeds. Next to these we place the old-fashioned Dominique. We are now writing for the farmer, and we would say to him that with fowls, as with everything else, it pays to raise the best, and that fowls require as good and as comfortable quarters in winter as any other stock on the place.—Baltimore Sun.
